TWENTY-FIRST YEAR. NUMBER 125.

SALT LAKE CITY, UTAH: THURSDAY, OCTOBER 30, 1890. plates can be secured at the prices proposed by the government. It was discovered early that a resort to competitive bids would remove the listility of anything like imposition upon the department and consequently inquiries into the quantity have demonstrated that authing short of a combination among placed miners would force the price up to the degree of extortion. Statements to the effect that the attitude of the government regarding nickel had increased its price do not appear to the navy department, whose purchase of nickel is limited only within a million dollars of the appropriation.

While the Annapolis tests undeniably affected nickel and made a material difference in cost it will concern those nations which will adopt nickel plate. Whatever difference there may be it does not seem to involve the United States. This government, according to one of its raprerentatives, has developed a condition of affairs that leaves the purchasing price of nickel almost optional.

Gladstone on the Effects of Protection.

London, Oct. 20.-Gladstone arrived in Dundee to day. He was presented with the freedom of the city. He made an address in which he referred to the commerce of the city, which, he said, was threatened a by the adoption of the new American tariff.
He would not however, bring a railing accusation against the people of the United States. Protection, although it might indict incidental collateral blows on other countries, did far greater mischief to the people of the country which adopted such a people of the country which adopted such as the people of the country which adopted such as the people of the country which adopted such as the people of the country which adopted such as the people of the country which adopted such as the people of the country which adopted such as the people of the country which adopted such as the people of the country which adopted such as the people of the country which adopted such as the people of the country which adopted such as the people of the country which adopted such as the people of the country which adopted such as the people of the people of

The first effect of the McKinley bill would be to raise the standard of prices in the United States. This meant a diminished power of expertation. This again meant that while we were damnified in one America was the country that could best afford to try strange and astonishing experiments. Her natural wealth, soil, minerals and national territory made her a world in he self. The possession of these enormous advantages helped to disguise the truth from Americans, but the McKinley bill would involve a fearful waste of resources by which the people ought to be made strong and happy.

must be irrigated to be productive. Owing to the severity of last winter, heavy losses were inflicted on the live stock industry.
A satisfactory increase is shown in the production of the mines, the output last year being nearly double that of any former season.
